

Abstract:

The inventive application describes a process for producing self-cleaning surfaces by means of a dry 5 coating process.

The process of the invention produces self-cleaning surfaces which have elevations formed by particles applied dry to the surface by means of a modified 10 flame-spraying process.

The process of the invention can equip textiles and other articles, in particular those having plastic surfaces, with self-cleaning properties.